> Standard Meals BY MARTHA WESTOVER

These menus are prepared for six persons, and contain all the food principles necessary to keep the body in splendid condition. Of course, it is understood that while I endeavof to give each day a menu with the least possible outlay financially, that if they were followed to the letter when you have in your ice box food left from previous meals, you will be indeed wasteful. No housekeeper, except the one actually conducting your household, can tell exactly what to use; for in the "leftover" class all the profit and loss of your week depends.

Any housewife can go to the market

Any housewife can go to the market or telephone for everything for one meal. It takes an intelligent one to get three efficient meals for the price of two. That intelligence is not to be found in a cookbook, and it is the spirit, and not the letter, of the house-keeping law that I try to instil in the daily menu.

Effore the concentration of a large percentage of the country, spopulation in cities and the opening of shops, of fices, and factories as a result of the spread of industrialism, people found their employment in the open. The eye, in serving its natural purpose, had a chance to rove about, and thus it secured enough exercise to make it strong and vigorous. Muscles and nerves were with Senator and Mrs. Claude A. To-day millions of eyes are focused for long hours upon single objects—the ledger, the legal brief, the delicate piece of machinery or tool, the fast moving needle, and all those other things which are part of the life of an industrial nation.

To-night a majority of those same eyes will be fixed just as steadily upon the fine print of the daily newspaper, magazine or book. There is no period

Look at the eye that is abused. You will see it everywhere. It is dull and lusierless. Its owner is continually squinting and distorting his face. But the eye that is well cared for is beauthe eye that is well cared for is beau-tiful, expressive and attractive.

Of primary importance is, the keep-ing of the eye in condition to render adequate service. If it is in that shape there are fewer headnehes and less ner-vousness. If in condition to properly fill its offices it is beautiful and ex-pressive.

Remember: The eyes are but small in proportion to the rest of the body, but their loss is the greatest of all.

Lillian Russell's Answers.
Frances: Few of us realize the important part our teeth play in keeping good health. The teeth should be cleansed after each meal to remove all particles of food that lodge between them and cause decay. Often they are the primary cause of loss of weight or failure to increase the weight. There may be a cavity which during the aight sends forth poisons which ruin the digestion. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall be glad to send you instructions on how to care for the teeth.

Martha: Try this formula and see if it will not remove the warts from your hands. Twenty grains salicylic acid, one-eighth ounce alcohol, and one ounce flexible collodion. Mix and apply to the wart for three nights, then soak in hot water, when a layer of skin will come off. Repeat until the wart last disappeared. This is also good for corns.

Treatment of Diarrhea—What is the best treatment for diarrhea of several years standing?

Reply: In the treatment of chronic diarrhea, since most cases are caused by ulceration in the colon, rest in bed for several days, a diet free from residue, and the use of suitable enemas to reach the local lesions will give the most satisfactory results. It is rather a futile business taking medicine into the mouth when the trouble is fully thirty feet away.

R. R. V. writes: Can you tell me what is good for nose swelling? I notice it mostly in the morning or at any time after lying down; the end of the nose swells but returns to natural size again soon after I get around on my feet.

Reply: Our long distance guess is that you have a low grade chronic hypertrophic rhinitis, or in American a chronic nasal catarrh with thickening of the turbinates in the nose. Have the focal means of the turbinates in the nose. Have the form and the use of suitable renems to reach the local larys, a diet free from residue, and the use of suitable days, a diet free from residue, and the use of suitable enems to reach the local lays, a diet free from residue, and the use of suitable e

Worried: Almond meal is excellent for cleansing the face, and where one's face is sensitive to soap this is an excellent substitute. I do not advise steaming the face too often. It will make the skin dry and take all the elasticity out of it, causing fine wrinkles in time. The best way to steam the face is to lay a cloth over it which has been dipped in warm water, but not hot, just warm enough to be pleasant.

Mrs. G. P.: Excessive perspiration of the hands indicates nervousness or poor circulation. After washing the hands in warm water apply alcohol and rub briskly. This closes the pores and stimulates circulation. Dust talcum

The eye that is constantly fixed upon a single object is under a special strain. It has no opportunity for invigorating exercise. Also frequently the same eye is weakened by the constant direct or indirect glare of the electric light.

Dr. H. Hays, of New York, also thought many tonsil operations did not harm—were superfluous operations. There are many other foci of infection to consider besides the tonsils.

Questions and Annual Control of the constant direct or indirect glare of the electric light.

Johnnycake—Is corn bread healthful to eat?
Reply: Johnnycake! A more satisfying, meal could hardly be placed before the brain worker who must beware of autointoxication. Johnnycake seems destined by nature to counteract the sedentary habit. It supplies the energy without the clinkers: it furnishes the steam without overtaxing the boiler.

Meat and Maize—Is corn meal a good substitute for meat for a person inclined to billousness?
Reply: Housekeepers should bear in mind this important difference between meat and maize. Meat feeds the host and at the same time intoxicates his parasites (colon bacilli): maize feeds the host quite as efficiently as meat, yet also offers obstacles to the existence of colon bacilli.

Diet for Diarrhea-Please suggest diet suitable for a case of chronic a diet suitable for a case of chronic diarrhea.

Reply: Scraped lean beef or mutton, zwiebach or twice toasted bread, plain soda crackers or saltines, in some cases boiled milk, tea or coffee with little or no cream but some sugar if desired, the white of egg raw or cooked or taken in the shape of albumin water. These are digested in the mouth and stomach, leaving little or nothing to irritate the bowel.

Gentry, in Locust Grove, exploded this morning, partially wrecking the kitchen and setting fire wrecking the kitchen and setting fire to the ceiling. Mr. Gentry, the only occupant of the room, was struck in the face by a flying piece of iron, and sustained a broken cheek bone. He was removed to the Martha Jefferson Hospital for treatment. The flames were extinguished by Mrs. Gentry with snow, as no water was available. Most of the furniture in the kitchen was smashed, and the force of the explosion shattered china in the sideboard in the dining-room adjoining.

stimulates circulation. Dust talcum powder on the hands before putting on the gloves.

F. B.: Nothing adds to the appearance of the hands so much as well-kept nails. The nails should be most carefully looked after. The white spots that appear on your nails are no doubt caused by raising the cuticle from the nail, which takes away the nutriment. Push back the skin with an orange stick, but do not raise it from the nail. I shall be giad to send you instructions on the care of the nails if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.
